Festa della Repubblica (Festival of the Republic or Italian National Day), is a national holiday in Italy on June 2 each year. It celebrates the day when Italians voted to abolish the monarchy in 1946 so their country could become a republic. With 12,717,923 votes for the republic and 10,719,284 for the monarchy, the male descendants of the House of Savoy were sent into exile.

To commemorate it, a grand military parade is held in central Rome, presided over by the President of the Republic in his role as the Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces. The Prime Minister, formally known as the President of the Council of Ministers and other high officers of state also attend. There are important celebrations in all the Italian embassies and foreign heads of state are invited. Even though in Rome there is the most important parade, many Italian cities celebrate the Republic Day as well.

In 1950, the parade was featured for the first time in the protocol of official celebrations. This provides for the ceremonial laying of a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at the Altar of the Fatherland or Vittoriano. The ceremony continues in the afternoon with the opening of the gardens of Quirinale Palace, seat of President of the Republic, the Frecce Tricolori aerobatic demonstration by the Italian Aeronautica Militare, and with musical performances by the band ensembles of the Italian Army, Italian Navy, Italian Air Force, the “Arma dei Carabinieri” (the National military police of Italy, policing both military and civilian populations), State Police, the “Guuardia di Finanza”, the Penitentiary Police Corps, the Bersaglieri, and the State Forestry Corps.

Festa della Repubblica o Giornata Nazionale Italiano, è una festa nazionale in Italia il 2 giugno di ogni anno. Si celebra il giorno in cui gli italiani hanno votato per l'abolizione della monarchia nel 1946, quindi il loro paese potrebbe diventare una repubblica. Con 12.717.923 voti per la repubblica e 10.719.284 per la monarchia, i discendenti maschi di Casa Savoia furono mandati in esilio.

Per commemorare essa, una grande parata militare si svolge nel centro di Roma, presieduta dal Presidente della Repubblica nel suo ruolo di Comandante Supremo delle Forze Armate. Il Primo Ministro, formalmente conosciuto come il Presidente del Consiglio dei ministri e degli altri ufficiali alti di stato anche partecipare. Ci sono celebrazioni importanti in tutte le ambasciate italiane e capi di stato stranieri sono invitati. Anche se a Roma c'è la parata più importante, molte città italiane celebrano la Festa della Repubblica pure.

Nel 1950, la sfilata è stata descritta per la prima volta nel protocollo delle celebrazioni ufficiali. Questo prevede la posa cerimoniale di una corona sulla tomba del Milite Ignoto presso l'Altar della Patria o Vittoriano. La cerimonia prosegue nel pomeriggio con l'apertura dei giardini del Palazzo del Quirinale, sede del Presidente della Repubblica, le Frecce Tricolori dimostrazione aerobatica dalla Aeronautica Militare italiana, e con esibizioni musicali da parte dei complessi bandistici dell'Esercito Italiano, della Marina Militare Italiana, Aeronautica Militare Italiana, il "Arma dei Carabinieri" (la polizia militare nazionale d'Italia, polizia sia le popolazioni militari e civili), polizia di Stato, la "Guuardia di Finanza", il Corpo di Polizia Penitenziaria, i Bersaglieri e il Corpo Forestale dello Stato.
Each year, millions of Americans have allergic reactions to food. Although slightly more common in young children and in people who have a family history, most food allergies develop early in life and many are outgrown.

Food allergies occur when your body's immune system reacts to a substance in a food, usually a protein, your body sees as harmful. This sets off a chain reaction within your body. Symptoms can occur within minutes and can be mild — such as a runny nose or itchy eyes to severe and can even be life-threatening.

A food intolerance is not the same as a food allergy. Different food intolerances have different causes. An intolerance occurs when your body is unable to digest a certain component of a food, such as lactose, a sugar found in milk. Symptoms of intolerance may be unpleasant, including abdominal cramping or diarrhea, but they are not life-threatening.

Types of Food Allergies

More than 170 foods are known to cause food allergies. However, eight foods account for 90 percent of all food-allergic reactions:

- Milk
- Egg
- Peanuts
- Tree nuts (walnuts, cashews)
- Fish (pollock, salmon, cod, tuna, snapper, eel and tilapia)
- Shellfish (shrimp, lobster, crab)
- Soy
- Wheat

Eating Well with Food Allergies and Intolerances

People with food allergies or intolerances need to avoid foods that make them sick. But navigating menu items and dishes, where many foods include a combination of ingredients, can be difficult. Allergy-triggering foods may be prepared on the same counters, or with the same utensils as non-allergy causing ingredients. Through cross-contact, a food allergen can creep into what may otherwise be a safe food.

If you have a food allergy or intolerance, be sure to speak with whoever is preparing your food to inform them of your allergy and ask them to be especially careful when preparing your food.

Follow these tips if you have a food allergy or intolerance:

Meet with a Registered Dietitian Nutritionist. An RDN can help you understand which foods are safe to eat and how best to avoid items that may cause a reaction. When foods are cut from your diet, you may be short-changing yourself on important vitamins and minerals. An RDN can help ensure you get the nutrition you need for your health and lifestyle. Find a Registered Dietitian Nutritionist.

Learn About Ingredients in Foods. Eggs, wheat, milk and other allergy-causing foods are often called by other names. To help avoid allergens, the Food and Drug Administration has mandated food companies specify on product labels if any of the eight major allergens (listed above) is contained in the food. If you do not have an allergy to one of the eight, your RDN can guide you on how to further read an ingredient label.

Read Labels Carefully. Manufacturers can change ingredients of products without notice, so double-check ingredient labels every time you buy a food, even a familiar one. Cosmetics and beauty products also may contain common allergens such as milk, egg, wheat and tree nuts.

Talk with Your Day Care, School and Workplace. Make sure the teachers, nurse and administrators at your child's school or day care center are aware of your child's food allergies and that they know how to respond to adverse reactions your child may experience. Similarly, inform your coworkers of allergies you have. Some people are familiar with food allergies and know what to do if a person has a reaction; others may not and will need your help in keeping your risk for exposure low.
